In each Cavalier's moments of awareness of life, he sensed the real meaning of "The Woodson Way". Somehow, the Way to live was linked with Togetherness found in student life, Discovery in the classrooms, Cavalier Spirit in all sports, Enrichment offered by Woodson's organizations, and the overall contagious Happiness of the student body.

Togetherness WTW

Together, Cavaliers faced each day of the 1966 year. With this togetherness, they experienced the personal insignificance of being in the crowds, the agony of defeat, the tension of exams; they shared together the joy of close friendships, the thrill of victory, and the pride of knowledge.

Discovery WTW Spirit

Enrichment WTW

Discovery was the reward of seeking knowledge, and encouragement to seek it sprang up everywhere. On school tablets, "Learning is Light" served as a reminder of each Cavalier's personal dedication to find truth in knowledge.

At the end of the academic day, students closed shop and donned attire befitting a varsity spectator. Strangers to Woodson could then see Cavalier spirit perform its special kind of osmosis, from the cheerleader to the fans and finally to the team who took WTW's spirit to the state tournament.

"Enrichment" recalls the serenity of Honor Society Inductions, the awe of a Scottish sword dancer, and the gourmet adventure of an International Dinner. These were all part of the fascination of club activities.

Happiness wore more than three thousand faces this year. Among them were seven snow days, a basketball championship, an "underwater" prom and . . . GRADUATION, the door opened by 'The Woodson Way'.

Happiness WTW

Dedication

While trying to record the life of this school year at Woodson we have discovered that there is one factor which determines the future of an already superior high school. Instinctively we know this factor is something beyond an excellent faculty, modern facilities, a champion basketball team, or progressive policies. It is better defined as the result of all these attributes.

Each year the men and women graduating from the W.T. Woodson High School form an ever enlarging body. They carry within themselves the brand of this high school, taking what is called "The Woodson Way" into every conceivable field of service and employment. Through their accomplishments, Woodson has, in little less than half a decade, felt the prestige and respect of being a distinctive educational institution. Year after year, colleges and universities search WTW for prospective students because former Woodson graduates have proven themselves outstanding. We therefore with genuine pride and trust that we salute the first completely Woodson graduate—the Class of 1966.

Togetherhness in STUDENT LIFE

Fall colors blended

A refreshing pop of color is seen as the fall colors blend back home for exhausted Cavaliers.

There they were, the four classes of Woodson High School, back to face a hectic August morning of new schedules and teachers. During the first days of school, members of all the classes greeted old friends, filled out Federal Survey forms and welcomed AFS and other foreign students. However, the student body of Woodson had not yet united.

As the various activities and clubs of Woodson began to function, the seniors assumed their new positions of leadership and realized their responsibility. The freshmen began to understand the challenge and meaning of high school. Each academic day, the four classes worked together as a team. At the Back-to-School Dance, the seniors, juniors, sophomores, and freshmen mingled together socially for the first time.

With the Woodson Way Drive, Student Government made an extra effort to emphasize to all Cavaliers that the conduct and appearance of the student body influences the reputation of a school. Two weeks later, Woodson broke all previous records for magazine drives and established itself first in the state in spirit and support. When the first AFS assembly officially welcomed our two exchange students, Ayseur Tamer and Vita Schulz, the girls knew that they were being received by an appreciative and unified student body.

"Oops, I was positive he said a right turn!" exclaims lost freshman Pat Lloyd.

Agents Danne Waters and Stan Owens rally the counter-espionage spirits of 0066 for their new argument—the magazine drive.

Through excitement and pride, football spirit

Varsity cheerleaders lead a rousing yell for a winning team.

The name, CAVALIER, prompted many different responses during football season, all of which combined to create that intangible something called "spirit." To some, it was a regular Friday pep rally in front of the school on a brisk autumn morning, with the Cheerleaders, Majorettes, and Pep Band. To others, football spirit meant decorated goal posts, half-time shows with the marching band, and crowded Cavalier stands on game nights, despite the weather. Football spirit was an enthusiastic Senior Section throughout the entire season, with "Give a Yell" and "Boom-Chicka-Boom" yelled just as often as the traditional "Two B's".

True football spirit was easily recognized. It went hand in hand with frozen toes, damp stringy hair, a red nose, laryngitis, and most of all, pride in our team.

Gold and Ivy twirled

A pep rally and the presentation of floats and the homecoming court marked the beginning of Woodson's second annual Homecoming Weekend. After a parade where the floats of all four classes were presented to the audience, the Freshman Class was awarded first prize. The crowd was then treated to a mock court where Tom Miller graciously received the honors of coronation. Folk singers and the Cavalette Baton Corps' fire-twirling exhibition climaxed the events of the night.

A 35-13 victory over GW topped the events of the weekend for a delighted alumni. At half-time on that bright and victorious Saturday, beaming Joyce Whetzel, was crowned queen to reign at the "Gold and Ivy" dance.

That evening, happy couples danced to the loud music of "The Rogues" in the gold and green crepe paper-draped cafeteria. The honored guests, Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Woodson and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Phipps, were among those awed by the ceremonies.

enjoyment and counsel

A popular feature in the academic world of Woodson was the assembly program. Students were acquainted with various aspects of American and world culture through assemblies of the American Field Service where students heard speeches by foreign exchange students and American returnees.

Assemblies with the accent on music were held frequently. Before Thanksgiving vacation, Senior Paul Hollar narrated a program of holiday songs presented by the Symphonic Choir. The Fine Arts Committee of the National Honor Society sponsored the concert given by the Air Force Piper Band. Observing the daring sword-dancing and hearing the mood music of the bagpipes, many students discovered a Scottish spirit in themselves.

Some assemblies served as political functions. Each class met separately to hear the platforms of candidates for the Student Government offices, and friends left the auditorium arguing about the qualifications of the speakers.

W.T.W. was changed into a festive land of gaiety and excitement for the 1965 Christmas season. Halls echoed with laughter and happiness as students entered the classrooms through brightly decorated doors, depicting Christmas past, present, future. Daily deliveries of Christmas cards were made to each first period class, helping to bring the students closer to the true meaning of Christmas.

The Christmas Drive, sponsored by Student Government, was a superb success. Woodson students collected canned foods, decorations, and presents to give fifty-nine local families a Christmas they would never forget.

Special choral and band assemblies added to the holiday spirit. Woodson glowed with a warmth and friendliness that made Christmas a very special time of year.

The Christmas Dance highlighted Christmas 1965 for Woodson students. Cafeteria B was decked out as a gay hunting lodge, complete with panelled walls and coats-of-arms. A big stone fireplace added warmth to the festive spirit of the couples. Inside Cafeteria A, couples danced to the swinging rhythm of the "Apollos", and in the middle of the evening saw the impressive presentation of the court princesses. Each princess was spotlighted as the master of ceremonies, Jim Schwenk, introduced the girls.

The crowning of Donna Lawton by the 1964 queen, Alice Chalfont, was the final highlight of the evening. Then the girls danced with their escorts to the Senior Class song, "Misty."

A sound of bouncing balls echoed through the gym

Coach Paul Jenkins gives some last minute instructions to his boys

The football season had no sooner faded from the scene, than the echoing of bouncing balls filled the gymnasium. The cheerleaders exchanged their white sweaters and saddle shoes for blue vests, pinstripped blouses, and red tennis shoes.

The bleachers overflowed with excited Cavalier fans, eager for victory. Action packed moments filled each game as the two opposing teams clashed and scored those vital points. The gymnasium resounded with the pounding of hurried steps as players raced from one end of the court to another. Each move was followed by excited spectators, as the cheerleaders led repeated chants of "Go, Woodson, Go!"

When those last few points were scored, and victory was once more achieved, fatigued players and hoarse fans filed out of the gym, already looking ahead to the next encounter.

Following some of the home contests, Booster Club sponsored sock hops took place in the small gym. Dancers in stocking feet frugged and jerked to the rocking music of various "live" bands. The basketball season provided additional spark to the spirit that exemplified Woodson's student life.

and cheers of victory

In the April 11 basketball game of the year, the seniors were pitted against the mighty Class of '66. The starters for the senior team: Pat Crowley, Larry Eloraker, Jim Jones, Lenny Marshall and Steve Martin began racking up points seconds after the first tip. Some of Coach Dave Strong's anti-underplay then rolled into a lion. Steve Kunkle could not wait to place one of his sneakered feet into a teammate's hand for a boost up to "dunk." Later on, as seniors began showing a little competition, the upperclassmen decided it was time to reveal their true side—the Wild Animal. From then on, it was evident that under Coach Dave Oliverio and his team would have to wait until 1967 for a victory.

There's just something in the air when the warm, sunny days roll around that makes studying and teaching a terribly difficult job.

The cacophony of a spring breeze, the rambles of blue jays, evergreens and clusters of blooming flowers helped to mask spring fever, a contagious disease among Cavaers. It was not unusual to see large groups of students scattered on the campus while they slowly ate lunch or entertained themselves in circular pursuits. But most often when they found a spare moment, Cavaers escaped into the outdoors and pleasant weather.

The Keyette Club's daffodil sale brightened an atmosphere bubbled with excitement and activities. Junior Jugglers and the Senior Class play Santa Pacific and group choral exercises added to the warm, lighthearted spirit that permeated MTW.

In spite of the time consuming extracurricular activities, academic standards did not falter with Windsor students. Upperclassmen rushed through the final stages of their term papers. For many, spring was their last chance at college boards. Underclassmen pieced the loose ends of their studies together, as all looked towards the end of the year.

Dramatic presentations

Reverend Brown, General Secretary, holds a revival meeting with Brad, who plays a new and unusual guest.

Waving palm trees and grass skirts set the stage for the Senior Class Play "South Pacific" with Lynn Benson and Buster Newman in starring roles. In the hectic rehearsals different parts of the auditorium were designated for nurses, sailors, dancers, and actors. The plot of "South Pacific" involves a young nurse on a South Pacific island during World War II who falls in love with a French plantation owner. The tragic subplot of sailor Cable and native girl Fat ends with death for Cable. Going backstage on performance night one saw make-up committees putting on the finishing touches, props taken to their appropriate places, and the stage manager running frantically from the dressing room to the light cage and then to the stage.

The Drama Club play, "You Can't Take It With You" and the Junior Class Play "Inherit the Wind," dominated the stage during their months of practice. In "Inherit the Wind" a teacher was prosecuted for teaching the theory of evolution in school.

The classroom, empty, ready when the final bell signals the end of a long year and the start of summer vacation.

Lynn Fitzgerald finds her ring given up for lost as her locker reveals its first and last meaning.

Gazing drowsily out of windows, dreaming of approaching graduation, and planning for summer vacation tantalized everyone from students to teachers. At Baccalaureate, members of the graduating class realized they were no longer carefree high school students, but responsible young adults.

It was not unusual to see students plowing through piles of balled up paper in those remaining days when lockers were emptied. As each stashed-away treasure was brought to light and fresh air once more, it was carefully studied for any left-over but precious memories before it was forsaken in the nearest trash can. During the last few days of school, students struggled through two-hour examinations.

When the last day finally arrived, there were more smiles than tears, more shouts of laughter than doleful good-byes. Even when yearbooks were signed and friends parted until next year, the air was bursting with the excitement of future plans for summer jobs, jaunts to the ocean, and beach parties.

As the Cavaliers returned to the familiar halls of the W. T. Woodson High School following summer vacation, they were welcomed with a cordial greeting from their new principal, Mr. Robert Phipps. Taking his new position this year, Mr. Phipps was faced with the overall coordination of the academic education and extracurricular activities of over 3200 high school students.

The administrative staff, respected by faculty and students alike, included Mr. Volrath, Mr. Simms, Mr. Ladson, Mr. Blanton, Mr. Mason, and Mr. Clark. Woodson's principal and staff maintained an 'Open Office Door' policy that enabled students to make inquiries without constraint. Problems of communication in such a large school were overcome through their direction. With the administration's enthusiastic support of the ideals essential to the Woodson Way, the students and teachers achieved new levels of cooperation and understanding.

GUIDANCE — from registration to final graduation

With the onset of a new year, guidance counselors turned to the ever important task of assisting seniors in their choice of a college. Aided by the College Viewmaster and a diverse selection of college catalogs, students were able to gather valuable information about prospective colleges.

Counselors provided the knowledge, assurance, and guiding hand to inspire confidence in their counselees by putting through schedule changes, giving advice about enrolling new students, and offering a sympathetic ear if a student wanted to talk.

In spite of the frenzied activity in the guidance office, it was a mark of dedication that counselors never lost sight of the personal identity of the students. Despite the size of Woodson, every student received the individual attention necessary to pilot him through a successful four years of high school.

because of personnel's SPECIAL SERVICES

Throughout Woodson, determined personnel carried out their special services in order to keep the school functioning smoothly.

Under Miss Carson's expert control, IBM machines produced thousands of report cards. While IBM was printing forms, Mrs. Dolan, the school nurse, was helping ailing Cavaliers. During exam and term paper season, the clinic was busiest, as more headache cases reported.

Headaches were eased, however, when students charged to the cafeteria for lunch. Fourth period included a break for all except Mrs. Spaulding's cafeteria staff. The IBM staff, the school nurse, and the cafeteria staff provided vital services from which students benefitted.

Early in the morning the library was a haven for students locked out of their first period classrooms, and throughout the day it served as a retreat from the overcrowded halls of Woodson. Even on noisy days its quiet atmosphere led students to indulge in pleasant reverie.

More than five thousand new volumes were added this year. Woodson's three librarians, the library secretary, and student assistants attractively arranged and kept track of the nineteen thousand books that filled the shelves.

To the pride and satisfaction of the librarians student assistants proved themselves to be invaluable attendants.

Different collections of paintings on loan from the National Gallery of Art were displayed on the walls of the library throughout the year, as a service of the National Honor Society.

With the variety of books in the library, each student was able to increase his knowledge of the world, while discovering new facets of his personality.

Teachers emphasized fundamental composition skills

Intensive English was offered only to seniors who had special interest in the study of literature. They prepared for the course by reading Don Quixote, Morte d'Arthur, and a number of other books during the summer. Classes were devoted to developing an understanding of and appreciation for world literary themes.

The emphasis which all English instructors placed upon the fundamentals of composition prepared students for critical and creative writing. After a year of studying the techniques and styles of various authors, students gained a better insight into the world of literature.

Government classes

A moment of silence reigns, as students pause to consider the death of history.

Students seem to enjoy learning of the world's landscapes, vast ocean masses, cultures, and problems

visited local courthouse

Does history repeat itself? This question challenged the classes in social studies. The individual was forced to decide for himself if the answer to today's problems can be found in the analysis of yesterday's mistakes. The course broadened student viewpoints by exposing them to the reality of the different philosophies of foreign nations. Starting with geography, students learned of world topography and its effect upon the culture and customs of man. World history pupils remembered different periods of civilization by the wars which had taken place and the conquerors who ruled.

Basics of civilization were studied in world history

During the year American Ideas students struggled with writer's cramp as they filled notebooks with lecture quotes and references.

Government classes were especially active at Woodson this year. Besides distilling knowledge from classroom study, students were routed out of bed at 6:30 in the morning for a trip to the Virginia General Assembly. They were greeted by Gov. Mills Godwin and Delegate Dorothy McDiarmid, and later observed sessions of the Senate and the House of Delegates.

Calculus put theory to use in practical problems

Although math students could have used their personalized digital computers (better known as the finger-toes system), or perhaps an abacus, they found that it was much faster to solve problems algebraically.

The Math Department added five new courses this year: Calculus, Math Analysis, Academic Refresher Math, and Algebra I, Parts I and II. As a special activity for most math classes, a program on coordinate planes was given in the planetarium. The attitude toward the study of mathematics was contemporary, and despite routine student struggles, the teachers felt that the modern approach succeeded in interesting more students than ever.

students in SCIENCE

Waves slowly spread across the ripple tanks as physics students studied the laws of nature. A frog was slit from top to bottom in a biology lab, while across the hall, chemistry students tested the acidity of an unknown solution. In biology, chemistry, and physics, as well as earth science and astronomy, science students coped with many such challenging experiments. The approach to science this year called for the student's analysis and evaluation of data, and through experimentation and outside research, a Woodson student experienced the excitement of discovery and the satisfaction of accomplishment.

Using modern educational techniques, science instructors strove to develop scientific curiosity and reasoning ability. Certainly, there was achievement in the fact that a girl who once shuddered at the thought of a spider, now merely sidesteps one while identifying its family, genus, and species.

A.L.M., a modified form of brainwashing, survived a first year as the Woodson method of foreign language study. Memorization, recitation, travel posters, and songs comprised an important part of the beginning students' education. To learn dialogues and proper pronunciation, students used the language labs, and therefore broken tapes, structure drills and conjugations became a part of the student's daily life as he struggled to master another language.

The aim of the instructor to teach the student to think in a foreign language was furthered by the addition to the library of an encyclopedia in each of the languages taught at Woodson. No longer did students have to flounder through a word-by-word translation of the World Book Encyclopedia.

The Extravaganza was an outlet for students' organizational as well as musical talents, and provided pupils with a welcome change from the more formal Thanksgiving, Christmas, and Easter concerts. In addition to holiday concerts, choir activities included several class assemblies.

Travel comprised a large part of the Music Department's activity. Several of the choirs performed in area concerts, while the Symphonic Band journeyed to New Jersey for its annual exchange concert. In their performances, the bands and the choirs had the opportunity to display the style and originality of their musical achievements.

insight into modern life

The quality of the projects undertaken by Home Economics students this year gave evidence of their interest and ingenuity in homemaking. For an international dinner sponsored by F.H.A., girls who had lived in a foreign country prepared native dishes and wore the traditional dress of that country. While the girls worked in various special activities and classroom assignments, they were making many of their own clothes. The Spring Fashion Show climaxed the year's activities as students modeled their original creations before an audience of envious girls and happy young men.

Practical and creative abilities were developed in industrial arts. This male sanctuary in the midst of co-ed Woodson provided the students with a choice of courses: woodworking, electronics, metal working, mechanics, and mechanical drawing. In the construction of projects the students visualized and designed a plan, engineered the construction problems, and carried through their plans of procedure to produce a finished product. But few girls dared to venture into a course in this department, fearing that becoming an expert on such subjects as electronics would not endear them to their boy friends.

Skills were gained in BUSINESS EDUCATION

In a trance of concentration, Maggie Selby types her favorite manuscript.

This year there was an increase in the number of students interested in entering business vocations or developing personal skills. The fundamental skills of typing, shorthand, and bookkeeping were not the only ones taught to students, for many pupils took the special courses in the operation of office machines and computers.

Industrial-Cooperative Training gave pupils the opportunity to hold a job while attending school. Students spent four hours in classes and four to six hours on-the-job training.

In Distributive Education, classroom instruction was coupled with occupational study of retailing in local stores. From participation in actual commercial businesses, students gained invaluable experience in handling transactions with customers.

VOCATIONAL EDUCATION — to develop ability

In Woodson's large vocational department, teachers combined two educational techniques—classroom instruction and job practice. Students interested in developing their abilities attended the two and three hour courses in carpentry, cabinetmaking, practical nursing, drafting and design, air-conditioning, refrigeration, electronics, electricity and mechanics.

Vocational students praised the course combination of instruction and practical experience. In automotive repair and cosmetology, students performed services for paying clients. Only in this manner could students render service at such a low cost to their customers and render high value to themselves.

PHYSICAL EDUCATION was Health in Action

Skill and coordination are tested on the narrow balance beam

Students gained the vigor needed to finish the day

Whether the physical education students were indoors or outdoors, they enjoyed participating in the various sports taught by the gym instructors. In one corner of the fields, a female archer was attempting to hit the target, while in another corner, the catcher of a boys' baseball team faced a count of three and two.

Physical education gave students an hour during the day to relax mentally while improving their flexibility, coordination, control, and balance. While freshmen and sophomores spent part of their year in health and driver training studies, juniors and seniors were free to take part in a wide range of individual and team sports. The boys seemed to favor football, but the girls preferred the less strenuous sports of pingpong and tennis. Despite these differences of opinion, both sexes agreed upon the value of physical education in a student's schedule.

Second half rally swamped GW in Homecoming game

Returning one of George Washington's many punts, Jackie Marsh helps set up another Woodson score.

This year witnessed the graduation of the freshman team of 1962. The true Woodson spirit was exhibited in the first win of the season against Jefferson. However, bad weather and costly penalties contributed to the Cavaliers' five-game losing streak. Mistakes proved costly in these games; a fumble and an interception on Annandale's 10-yard line started the string of losses.

When the Madison game concluded, a 28-6 Woodson win brought new life to Cavalier action. Woodson came from behind to overpower GW 35-13 in the second annual Homecoming game. Throughout the year, the scoring punch centered around quarterback Dave Strong, who threw seventeen touchdown passes, mainly to his favorite target Dave Marsden.

In the annual Sports Awards Night, five boys received recognition for their playing and sportsmanship. On offense, the Outstanding Back and Lineman awards went to Strong and Dan Schultz, respectively.

led by Captain Sandy Harwell, varsity cheerleaders were always present to support the teams during the year. From Spirit Week to the last basketball game, their contagious enthusiasm never ceased. Whether they were stirring the crowd to a roar at the game or watching anxiously from the sidelines, they showed the true character of a Cavalier.

Besides supporting the varsity teams the girls cheered at the annual Redskins-Faculty Basketball Game. Come spring, they attended varsity wrestling, track, and baseball events.

At trophy awarding time, even hoarse Cavaliers were grateful to these girls for the energy they were always willing to give.

Woodson's junior varsity football team finally had a winning season as it completed the year with a 5-1-2 record. After a tie with Annandale, the team bounced back with a close win over Edison 13-12, followed by a loss to Fort Hunt. In the next four games, Woodson scored 101 points compared to twenty for the opponents, making short work of their adversaries. The season was ended with a tie against GW.

In compiling the most victorious junior varsity football record in the history of Woodson, the boys displayed cooperative team spirit for every game. In professional fashion, junior varsity employed separate offensive and defensive units enabling each player to concentrate on his particular aspect of the game.

From examining the experience these varsity trainees worked for during the season, coaches made plans for more power in next fall's team.

Pete Hansen (24), the Outstanding Freshman Player, stretches to outreach an opponent for a pass from Bill Neslev.

An opening loss to Edison was the only event that blocked freshman football's bid for a perfect season. Under the experienced direction of Coach Dan Lehman, they went on to win their next five games over Fort Hunt, Lee, Fairfax, Madison, and Falls Church. For the season, the freshman football team scored ninety-nine points while limiting their opponents for four straight games.

Leading the offense for the freshman team was halfback Pete Hansen, who won the Outstanding Player award.

Freshman football reached its goal by teaching more than simply the fundamentals of football; it also taught the importance of cooperation and teamwork.

Both JV and Freshman

Fresh, new spirit emerged this year as junior varsity cheerleaders strove to make their wish for underclass unity come true. Under the enthusiastic leadership of captain Bernadette Laraia, the girls boosted the crowd's and junior varsity squad's morale during the game. Even when the outcome looked bleak, they were still behind their team all the way. In the fall, J.V. cheerleaders conducted a clinic to teach aspiring freshmen the techniques of cheering.

The presence of the freshman cheerleaders as part of the underclass organization assured the freshmen that they too were an important part of Woodson High. The direction of Captain Linda Morales inspired the girls to put forth their best efforts when cheering football and basketball games. No matter how hot or cold, sunny or rainy the weather was on those Saturday mornings, the freshman cheerleaders were always there to follow their team to the top.

Long practices were key factors in individual victories

Around the fence, out the gate, and through the parking lot trotted the Cross Country team. Demanding great endurance, Cross Country was a difficult sport in which to participate. The five runners on the varsity team ran against three or four other teams at one meet. For the first time in Woodson's history and Coach Bielich's experience, the bottom "A" squad runner beat the time of their own top "B" squad member in the meet against Madison, Marshall, and Falls Church.

At the end of the season, the varsity team had no wins, two third finishes and five losses. "But", said an optimistic member, "we won a scrimmage."

The "B" squad had better luck and was undefeated except for their last meet. They placed fourth in the Northern Virginia meet and promised to be an even higher ranking team next year.

From April through early November, The Fairfax Rifles competed against adult teams in fourteen meets, and proved their skill by winning one first and two second place prizes with the famed WTW cannon. Individually, the boys scored high in musket and cap-and-ball pistol shooting.

The Musket Team was the only activity in which the alumni participated. This team set for its goals: good fellowship, self discipline, team play, and good sportsmanship.

triumph over Groveton

After the girls varsity hockey team out-scored Groveton 2-1, they played confidently and successfully through the two remaining games. The coaching of Miss Poarch encouraged the girls to do their best as they wrapped up the season with a record of five wins, no losses, and three ties.

Cindy Corso was presented the Outstanding Player award, and Karen Rhinehart received the Sportsmanship award. Colleen Hay received a special award for her four years participation on the varsity team. Though these girls were selected to be given awards for their exceptional play, it took continuous effort on the part of every team member to achieve success.

The junior varsity team, led by Coach Harvelick, finished its season with a notable 5-0-3 record. The highlight was a tie with Groveton, their arch-rival and toughest opponent. After having such a successful season, the coach was confident that these girls would strengthen next year's varsity.

Several new faces were seen in the Cavalier lineup. Skip Brandon, Walter Hawkins, and Roland Holland were transfers from the old Luther Jackson High School. Hawkins led the scoring with a 16.0 point average. Brandon maintained the second highest average at 15.3, while Dave Oliverio, the Junior co-captain, consistently pitched in 15.0 points. Hawkins was the leading rebounder, averaging over 20 rebounds a game.

JV learned skills needed for next year's Varsity

As spectators filed in for varsity basketball games, many were surprised to see a game already in progress. The JV basketball team played its games before every varsity contest.

Mistakes proved costly as the JV team compiled a record of seven wins and eleven losses. Although the team did not enjoy a winning season they gained experience and acquired the skills of the game. Coach Felton did credit them with improvement as the season advanced.

Jim Jukes and Chuck Hoffman were the leading scorers for the team. Yale Lyman, John Knoche, and Jim Jukes gathered in most of the rebounds. The team suffered a setback two-thirds of the way through the season when John Oliverio was injured.

Freshmen gained experience by use of fifth quarter

Introducing boys to the fundamentals of play and teamwork is the primary function of freshman athletics. Under the coaching of Mr. Gary Kane, the freshmen played a ten-game season and finished with a strong record. Mr. Kane proudly said that John Pecorak, team co-captain, was the outstanding player leading the team in scoring and rebounding. The freshmen relied on Tracy Bridges and Terry Jukes when Pecorak became ill late in the season.

A six-minute fifth quarter for the boys who had not participated in a regulation game was an interesting sidelight of the season. This enabled all of the team to gain valuable game experience for their future goal of making the varsity team.

as W. T. Woodson matmen finished with winning season

Building on the foundation of two returning lettermen, the Cavalier wrestlers finished the season tied for second in their district with a respectable 7-3 record. Tom Byrne and Mike Young were chief contributors to the team's highly successful score. Weighing 165 lbs. and 112 lbs. respectively, they were undefeated at the season's end. Tom Byrne won the Northern District Championship and placed third in the state tournament which took place at Washington-Lee High School in February. In addition, Jeff Young, at 120 lbs., and Bob Elmore, at 138 lbs., had winning seasons.

Wrestling is an individual sport requiring mental and physical discipline. Before every match, the boys were required to make their individual weights. This meant a week of missing one or two meals a day, plus long practices of trying to sweat off pounds. Coach Dennis Houlihan called them "the best disciplined team I've ever coached."

JV wrestling completed an excellent season with only one loss to Falls Church stopping their bid for a perfect record. Coach Houlihan credited the boys with hard work and a great deal of improvement. JV wrestlers gained valuable experience by substituting for varsity team members who could not make weight. John Pitas was called on this year to replace the injured Mike Young. He wrestled in the final four varsity matches, winning two of them. Rick Crim (120), Karl Gallegos (145), Ed Blansett (154), and Steve Ulrich, also deserve recognition. With the experience gained by their participation and the natural potential of the boys, Mr. Houlihan believes Woodson's wrestling future looks bright.

Varsity season was highlighted by sportsmanship

Undaunted by their first three losses, the girls varsity basketball team won six of their last eight games to finish the season with an 8-4 record. The support and guidance of their coach, Miss Carolyn Legard, helped the girls face their opponents with determination and their disappointments with good sportsmanship. High-scorers Kathy Currie and Cindy Corso, and the defensive play of Mary Mastropaolo helped pull the team through a rough schedule.

Junior Varsity finished season with a 12-0 record

After tryouts, Miss Whitehead predicted that the girls' JV basketball team would have a successful season. This turned out to be a bit of an understatement as the team rolled over twelve straight opponents for a perfect record. The accurate shooting of Inez Jukes plus the leadership of co-captains Sharon and Sheila White inspired the team throughout the year. When the end of the season finally arrived, it was hoped that a precedent was set for future JV teams.

WTW golf team, under new coach, had long season

Headed by a new coach, the golf team had a year in which the players gained valuable experience. Under the direction of Mr. Toompas, they practiced once or twice a week at neighboring country clubs.

The team, which was composed of thirteen members, held tournaments at the Country Clubs of Fairfax, Chantilly, and Reston as well as many other courses. The six low scores plus two alternates played nine tournaments throughout the season.

Mr. Toompas felt that this should be a very promising year for the Woodson golfers. Returning members Emory Peters and Gordon Ruef led their fellow teammates to a strong season. One of its members, Marty Alford, who came from South Africa, was once taught by the famous pro, Gary Player.

Formed by a nucleus of experienced boys, the rifle team captured the County Championship for the second straight year. Mike Morton and Ed Harris headed the list of returnees. Steve Roth, who averaged 278 out of a possible 300 points for the season, Bill Jones, and Steve Jenkins were other shooters who contributed a great deal to the team's record. "The sad part about rifle is that most people don't realize how much individual effort the boys must exert," commented Coach James Humphrey. Anywhere from $250 to $400 is spent by each boy to prepare him for shooting. Most of this money is financed by the individual himself. Members supplied all of their own equipment, except ammunition. "Rifle takes a special kind of boy," said Coach Humphrey. "Like wrestling, it is one of the few truly individual sports." Only a boy who is dedicated, hard-working, and willing to give his all throughout the long six month season can find a place on the rifle team.

that provided them more activity in spring sports

Starting in March, a team of hard-hitting boys spent every clear afternoon practicing their lobs and backhands. Ed Gallup, Greg Cowart, John Lowery, Jim Strawinski, Rich Glikes, and Mimo al-Sarraf were the starting six tennis players when the action began, April 4, against Mount Vernon High School's tennis team. With these Woodson players on hand, Coach Jenkins could foresee a better record than the 5-5 one of 1965.

Early in April, the girls' tennis team began try-outs under Miss Lanks' direction. During the season, each girl practiced three times a week. Footwork and swing drills proved difficult in '66, as a different set of girls played in every tournament.

For many springs to come, Cavaliers may recall the echoes of "elbow straight . . . western grip", from careful coaches, and victorious shouts of "forty-love," heard over the staccato sounds of racket faces meeting tennis balls.

Battery was stronghold of W. T. Woodson's defense

Despite the fact that only three lettermen returned from last year's team, Coach Dan Lehman had high hopes for a fourth winning season. Jackie Marshall and Stan Owens were singled out as two of the top players on the team. Owens, a slick southpaw hurler, is one of the top pitchers in Northern Virginia. Three transfers from the old Luther Jackson High School, Rick Stewart, Dan Henderson, and Jackie Marshall added experience to the team.

Coach Lehman added that the team would probably be a better team than last year defensively. Bill Diesselhorst, Curt Gilbert, a senior, and Don Stoops provided depth for the Cavaliers, although the other boys pitched adequately. First base was covered by Tom Brownfield, a consistent long ball hitter. Alan Cook, a senior returnee, added experience to the outfield.

Good speed on the bases, average hitting, and excellent pitching put Woodson high in the league.

J.V. team was second step toward varsity material

Jun or Varsity hopefuls move for the ball during spring tryouts, hoping to land a place on the team.

After tryouts, Coach Lee Knupp immediately started training twenty energetic underclassman boys to play against O'Connell High, April 15. With the team's noticeable, overall improvement over last year's pitching and hitting, all were ready to play ten fast-moving games in a three-week schedule. Perhaps the most tension-filled games for pitcher Yale Lyman, supported by sophomores Bill Bigler on second base and John Driver in the outfield, were those against George Washington, Fairfax, and Washington-Lee. For all the team, the Washington-Lee game was the season's climax as well as the finale.

By the close of J.V. Baseball's game-packed three weeks, both coach and team could reflect on successful team effort; they could look ahead to a more experienced season in the spring of 1967.

Trackmen broke many school records set last year

The track team concentrated on rebuilding this year. Over one hundred boys reported for practice the first day, allowing Coaches Thompson and Wisler to select the largest team in the Washington area.

The team's main strength lay in sprints. Duncan Adams and Jim Jukes were expected to bring back many blue ribbons. Dave Marsden took two years of experience with him over high and low hurdles, and Dan Moorefield, a returning senior letterman was expected to do well in the 880. The coaches also had high hopes for Larry Young, Hap Hodges, Randy Bradshaw, and Scott Beuch.

Because of lack of depth, field events were not expected to be as strong as track events. Skip Brandon was the leading high jumper, Jim Schwenk was the discus thrower, and Chris Hill handled the shot put chores.

With the rest of the team learning, the coaches looked forward to a bright future.

Softball teams had new coach, experienced players

Tryouts and practice in late March were only the beginning of the 1966 season for the girls' varsity softball team. Innumerable hours after school, aching muscles, and intra-team games were typical requirements to produce an energetic team. Miss Whitehead encouraged the girls to take on their tougher opponents with determination and face defeat with good sportsmanship. The effort and spirit shown by the team proved that pride existed in every phase of Cavalier life.

The girls on the J.V. softball team this year were good evidence of the experience and achievement that can be expected of next year's varsity. From Miss Poarch's skilled coaching they learned to approach each adversary as a separate challenge and face defeat undaunted. After many days of grueling practice, they battled such teams as Marshall, Edison, and Lee. The big payoff at the end of the season was the knowledge of a job well done and a very commendable record.

throughout entire year

Intramurals, from wrestling to modern dance, offered fun and competition to students participating in sports. Basketball intramurals were most popular with the boys, but gymnastics and wrestling also captured the time and skill of interested Cavaliers. Spirit ran high as students competed in their favorite sports.

Girls, too, had the opportunity to take part in intramurals. Some tried their luck at bowling and modern dancing, while others enjoyed the fresh air playing soccer, basketball, tennis, and volleyball. Other favorites included various forms of track and field. Throughout the year, Woodson's intramural program provided interested students with opportunities to be active in a spectrum of invigorating sports.

Athletes were honored at two sports award banquets

The evening of March 24 climaxed all winter athletic efforts for the Cavaliers. This was the night all of Woodson realized the pride which had motivated certain athletes to strive for good sportsmanship and victory. Boys were recognized with awards in basketball, wrestling, and rifle, and girls were commended for their performances in basketball.

Mr. Phipps was on hand during the awards banquet to congratulate those who, through sports participation, had brought respect and honor to Woodson. Among those receiving trophies were Tony Barile, Varsity Basketball Sportsmanship Award; Tom Byrne, Outstanding Wrestler; and Dianne Waters, Girls Varsity Basketball Sportsmanship Award.

S.G. sponsored Magazine and Christmas Drives

In October, Student Government sponsored the annual Magazine Drive with its theme centered around spy rings. The Freshman Class Spy Ring 0069 sold the most subscriptions by the end of the drive. Overwhelming participation by all classes pushed Woodson's total sales past the state record.

The 1965 Christmas Drive evidenced the spirit that prevailed in Cavaliers. Canned food, toys and other gifts were collected for fifty-nine needy families in the area.

Leadership Training, conducted in February, gave students an insight into the problems of leadership. The theme, 'Voice of the Future,' was carried out as Student Government elections were held. As the new officers took their oaths, this year's officers stepped down, and the activities of the year were evaluated, students recalled a most successful and profitable year.

NHS Fine Arts Assemblies enriched students' lives

"I believe in character as the foundation of life . . ." echoed through the auditorium as the National Honor Society, sponsored by Mrs. Ford, Mrs. Hawn and Mr. Puffenberger, once more inducted proud students into their ranks in an impressive ceremony. The ideals of the Society, Character, Scholarship Leadership, and Service were exemplified by those students chosen for membership by a faculty committee.

Culture, in the form of fine arts, was presented to the student body as a Society service. Collections of paintings loaned by the National Gallery of Art were on display in the library during the year. Fine Arts assemblies were staged for the student body. NHS members served as ushers for National Symphony concerts held at Woodson.

Another of the services provided by NHS members was tutoring. Members led students through principles of math and other subjects as one of their services.

The 1965-1966 year marked the fourth of Woodson's CAVALCADE. In the past, it has received several national awards for journalistic excellence. The new staff and their sponsor, Mrs. Gorey, undertook the responsibility of keeping the CAVALCADE at that outstanding level.

A monthly publication, the CAVALCADE provided the school with timely news, interesting features, and a more effective editorial policy.

Students were urged to take full advantage of 'The Reader Speaks', where they could express their opinions concerning many aspects of student life. The editorial board strived for more pertinent, valid, and thought-provoking editorials.

on the main Cavalier Staff recording their activities

Late hours, breakfast, lunch, and dinner on McDonald's hamburgers, and about 100 boxes of "No Doz" tablets capsuled the year for the 1966 CAVALLIER Staff. Editor-in-Chief Shirley Hildebrand started the basic planning on the day after the last page of the '65 book had gone to press. During early September, Mr. Norris Williams, the CAVALLIER advisor; Debbie Petrovic, Business Manager; Lee Jarrell, Copy Editor; Chris Wright, Layout Editor; and Dan Shepherd, Photography Editor made the important decisions that shaped the book.

The editors represented the hub of a total staff of over fifty students. Members of the copy staff racked their brains, a dictionary, and a Thesaurus for the "perfect word". The layout staff made one-inch stubs out of pencils, while editors of the five sections chased after faculty and classmates for interviews and pictures.

It was in cafeteria B where the twenty-eight member sixth period staff and Mr. Williams, the CAVALLIER's new advisor worked night after night until deadlines were met.

As the last deadline neared, the 1966 CAVALIER showed signs of becoming a reality. Completed pages revealed the care of students who were ever grateful to Mr. Williams for his time and encouragement and to after-school advisors Miss Ida Speeks and Mrs. Roberta Sholett for their time and for answers to problems. In June, only the joy and pride on each student's face as he turned back the cover could make the remembrances of the staff's continuous hardships pass away.

Key Club sponsored second Blue and White Night

Bob Boulter and Jim Parker discuss plans for the second annual Blue and White Night.

The Key Club began the year with only thirteen boys, but quickly filled its ranks by inducting over twenty new members. In an important project organized by president Buster Newman, the club compiled the names and phone numbers of every student and sold a student directory. At the meetings, Key Clubbers heard speakers on leadership and service. As a result of a speech given by a representative of the Fairfax Cerebral Palsy Hospital, the members worked after school and on weekends doing much needed manual labor at the hospital.

In the spring, the Key Club sponsored a drive to adopt a Korean Orphan. The last major activity of the year was a trip to the Key Club convention in Norfolk, Virginia, an event eagerly awaited all year.

Sunny daffodils of spring brightened halls of WTW

September marked the beginning of another busy and rewarding year for Woodson's Keyette Club.

Led by president Nancy O'Flaherty and sponsor Mrs. Brown, the girls worked daily in the bookstore. During the holiday season, they held their annual candy cane sale and sent Christmas cards to faculty members. Spring was ushered in with dozens of brilliant daffodils that were sold by the Keyettes to the student body. To supplement the Peace Corps, the national Keyette project, the girls held a drive to earn money to provide books and sports equipment for the countries served by the Corps.

The 1965-66 National Keyette Convention, held in Washington, D.C., provided an opportunity for the girls to exchange ideas and learn new ways to serve.

maintenance of Christian ideals around the community

Youth for Christ, an interdenominational organization, maintained Christian standards through service to the community. Meeting agendas included Bible quizzes and games and discussions on current national and international problems.

Again this year Tr. H.-Y. pursued its goal of extending high standards of Christian character throughout school, home and community. New members were selected in the fall on the basis of fellowship and willingness to participate. Later they were inducted in a candle light ceremony at Woodson.

During December the Tr.-H.-Y. filled Christmas stockings with toys for the Salvation Army and won first prize for the most beautifully decorated door around WTW's halls. All activities were initiated through the guidance of sponsors Mrs. Harris and Mrs. Hutcherson.

German Club members ate their way through 1966

Wanderung, the German Club's first activity started the year on a high note. This hiking picnic was concluded with an European soccer game.

In the fall, the Foreign Language Club Dinner was held which the German Club presented folk dances done in authentic native costumes. On the menu were wiener schnitzel and sauerkraut. After the meal the club heard guest speakers, and listened to recorded German music.

Late in the year, a genuine German dinner was enjoyed at a downtown restaurant. To complement their dinner and entertainment, the German enthusiasts took an after-dinner trip through the German Embassy in the District.

Language Clubs learned about Rome and Spain

The Latin Club, sponsored by Mrs. Mathers strived to instill in its members a knowledge of the ancient Roman civilization and an appreciation of its contributions to the modern world. The club participated in the statewide Junior Classical Convention, the County's Saturnalia Festival and they dined at the "Il Caesars" restaurant. At its annual banquet, best known of the organization's events, members appeared in the costumes of Roman citizens.

WTW's Spanish Club, La Luz Castellana, stressed Spanish culture at its meetings this year. In addition to films and slides about Iberoamerican countries, the club heard guest speakers from Spain and Latin America. The less formal activities of the club included soccer games with the German Club and a fall hayride. At the International Dinner sponsored by all foreign language clubs, the Spanish Club prepared dishes and entertainment de Espana.

Last year the Chess Club was organized to provide interested students with the opportunity of increasing their skills. Each member worked at gaining membership and played in weekly intracub matches.

This year after joining the Northern Virginia Scholastic Chess League Woodson was entitled to compete with various member schools. Excitement mounted as Woodson's team twice became champion over Madison, the top ranking team in the district. Woodson's debut in the league was heightened by the election of one of its own members as the Chess League's president.

With five returning players having varsity experience, the Chess Club is looking forward to the fall of 1966.

Miss Story reviews her notes for a discussion at a History Forum meeting.

Seeking enrichment by studying America's heritage kept Woodstock's Forum on American History busy during the year. To supplement their study of one of America's famous pioneering people, the Pennsylvania Dutch, the club visited the Water Gate Inn and Arlington National Cemetery. In late fall, members traveled by bus to historical Jamestown and Williamsburg on an overnight trip. There, they obtained an authentic sampling of early colonial life. Accompanied by the sponsor, Miss Story, the Forum took a trip to Lee's birthplace at Stratford Hall in Virginia.

Looking back on a year of guest speakers' lectures, club reports, and field trips, members had to admit that the Forum on American History made many an afternoon very interesting and well-spent for them.

Teenagers love to argue, and the fifteen members of the W. T. Woodson Debate Team were no exception. However, these students were able to channel their argumentative natures into constructive debates on labor-management relations. Specifically, the 1965-1966 interscholastic debating topic was "Should the Federal Government adopt a program of compulsory arbitration in labor management disputes in basic industries?"

Under the direction of Captain Steve Agresta and faculty advisor, Mrs. Howard, the debaters learned practical skills in presentation and organization of materials, logic of argument and other debate techniques. Conferences at George Washington University and the University of Virginia also helped the students obtain a better understanding of the subject. After several practice scrimmages the team challenged other high schools in the Northern Virginia League to weekly debates beginning early in February and continuing through March.

Must the fury of debate? Steve Agresta makes another of his striking statements.

AFS worked all year to raise enough money to bring two foreign students to Woodson in the fall of '66. Several major projects were undertaken to achieve this goal. The club members started the year by selling school calendars which contained all the dates for important activities. Then their newspaper drive in February proved to be an economical success.

Connie Harper and Kathy Smith were honored by being selected Woodson's candidates to be sent abroad by the American Field Service. Two foreign exchange students, Vita Schulz from Germany and Aysemur Tamer from Turkey aided in international understanding at Woodson in 1966. The sponsor, Miss Bess Johnson, helped arrange for foreign citizens to speak at regular club meetings. One such lecturer was none other than Woodson's own French teacher, Mr. Condit.

One of the newest additions to Woodson's extracurricular activity program was the Mathematics Club, which was organized in December. Club meetings were held twice monthly, and membership grew rapidly. This club provided interested members with the opportunity to improve their mathematical abilities and to learn of the men in that field, their discoveries, and their theories.

The members studied the derivations of the basic ideas of mathematics. They were concerned not only with pure mathematics but also with the realms of Probability, Mersenne numbers, and Topology. These fields were enthusiastically investigated under the guidance and assistance of the sponsor, Mr. Bell. At the meetings the practical applications of mathematical principles in the various sciences were discussed by the members. Often after the studies had come to a close, the blackboards were covered with computations, equations, and diagrams . . . the results of an enjoyable but exasperating afternoon spent trying to find the fourteenth Mersenne number.

The 1966 Drama Club, under the leadership of president Nancy Niland, enacted two productions for the school and entered an annual one-act play festival.

In their first production "You Can't Take It With You," Dudley Wilson performed a memorable and comical role, that of old Martin Vanderhoff. At the snow-delayed play festival, Woodson's players staged the "Potboiler" before a group of judges. In spring, the Drama Club created an evening of one-act plays for the amusement of every type of theater-goer. The next activity was the truly dramatic Thespian inductions: The spring induction was also the scene of officer inductions, a preparation for 1967.

FTA members assisted elementary school teachers

The Future Teachers of America Club enabled its members to gain a broader understanding of the teaching profession and the different levels of education. Throughout the year, junior and senior members observed classes twice monthly at two local elementary schools, Mantua and Wakefield Forest. From these classroom sessions, the Woodson FTA students learned that a good teacher had to be instructive, intuitive, and impartial.

To serve both Woodson and the community the FTA undertook the sponsorship of the Red Cross Drive and financial aid program for future teachers. At the conclusion of the year, a deserving senior member was awarded a scholarship from the aid fund.

FHA held bake sales and an International Dinner

Woodson's chapter of the Future Homemakers of America demonstrated the willingness of youth to meet the challenge of today. With this in mind FHA made as its objective the improvement of the family, the community, and the world.

"Neighbors Near and Far" was the guiding theme for the year. The holidays were used for the development of those neighbors labeled as "near". At Christmas the FHA girls contributed stuffed animals to the Christmas Drive. To complete the club's theme, an International Dinner brought a little of the exotic to Woodson High.

With the installation of new officers and the awarding of achievement degrees to deserving members, the 1966 year drew to a close for WTW's Future Homemakers.

Members of Science Clubs displayed various skills

Mrs. Cipp and Susan Strong discuss an article from the Research Club's bulletin board.

Larry Young plays the role of a mad scientist.

The Terrestrial Science Club concentrated on the fields of geology, astronomy, topography, and related earth sciences. The sponsor, Mrs. Banks, led the club on an exploration trip to John Brown's Cave near Harper's Ferry, West Virginia, and on rock-hunting excursions in the surrounding states.

A desire to be informed characterized the twenty-two member Science Research Club. Under Mrs. Opp's experienced direction, the club constructed atomic structure models for demonstration by the science department. Members visited the Greenbanks Radio Observatory in West Virginia, and the Naval Observatory in Washington, D.C. At the Naval Research Lab, they attended four monthly lectures on new scientific discoveries.

As a member of the Junior Academy of Science the Research Club supported the annual Science Fair by selling refreshments.

Ron Anderson, Susan Cooke, Ann Schwemly and Robin Day make plans for an upcoming field trip.

The Electronics Club purchased a surplus radio transceiver and converted it for two meter operation from the school's outlets. When completed, the ARC-1 was Woodson's first amateur radio station. Following this project the members had high hopes of fixing Woodson's Citizen's Band radio equipment.

Throughout the year, the club carried on a campaign to acquire more members. With the help of the sponsor Mr. Mason, six more members joined, enlarging the roll to twelve.

Through learning about trigonometry, simple aerodynamics, and rocket stability, the Model Rocket Club attempted to promote interest in model rocketry. In the past three years, it has grown in size from four to twenty interested rocketeers. It became affiliated with the National Association of Rocketry and competed with Washington Lee and McLean High Schools.

Medical careers raised funds for crippled children

Mrs. Osterman speaks to the club on the nursing profession.

For those who were interested in the medical field, the Medical Careers Club provided an active year of cultivating their different interests. Trips to the Johns Hopkins Medical School and Medical College of Virginia gave members a peek at the medical world. Lectures about the nursing profession, social work, and birth defects gave members a picture of the many fields open to students of medicine.

Members of the club and their sponsor, Mrs. Marie Osterman, had an enjoyable day when they visited the Army Medical Museum in Washington, D.C. Other activities included a Halloween Party, a picnic at Great Falls, and a banquet for members and their parents.

Community projects sponsored by the club were highlighted with a March of Dimes Drive. Proceeds from a lollipop sale and individual student contributions were turned over to the Association for the Cure of Birth Defects and Arthritis. Volunteer work at Junior Village twice a month, preparation of scrapbooks for children at Junior Village, and assistance to the parents of a crippled child in the community each Sunday made the year interesting and active for students in the club.

Students gained confidence, extra money, and self-satisfaction by learning from experimentation in the Distributive Education Program. They received in school and on the job training in marketing and distribution. Outstanding D.E. students racked up individual awards and honors while representing Woodson in district and national competition.

Woodson's Industrial-Cooperative Training Club, supervised by Mr. Watts, has become one of the largest organizations in Virginia. The members sponsored a candy sale in the fall and later participated in the district convention and the Employer-Employee Banquet. This year's highlight was the State Convention where participants entered contests and represented their different chapters at meetings.

The low hum of hair dryers, clatter of rollers and clips, and the splash of water as new hair styles were created were the sounds of the Woodson Cosmetology Association. Activities for the club included trips to Val's Beauty Salon in Annandale. At regular meetings, guest speakers discussed the problems of running a beauty shop.

Cavalettes added color at halftime by performing

Gretchen Gregory and Irene Jensen stand at attention.

"Will they get burned?", asked a little girl anxiously. The halftime audience always wondered how the majorettes managed such assurance while twirling their flaming batons.

The fire routine was the Corps' most exacting; yet, the Cavalette Baton Corps always performed routines which required professional precision and lively spirit. This year the majorettes, led by Captain Susie Ludtke, performed at pep rallies, football games, and the music department's annual "Extravaganza". In addition to attendance at these events, the girls rendered their services as usherettes at band concerts.

Weekly during football season, the Corps and band rehearsed their forthcoming performances. In their colorful, red-plumed hats and vivid blue outfits, the Corps added brightness to halftime shows.

In June the girls were able to look back upon an eventful year. Afield and at home, the Corps set an excellent example of school spirit.

Woodson - Cavalier, Richard, is to stand in front of the shop.

In an effort to promote spirit and perform services for athletic activities, the Pep Club decorated goal posts for football games, and camouflaged the cafeterias for sports award assemblies. They provided other services by creating a display for the evaluation committee, and for freshman orientation. The posters lining the halls were other examples of Pep Club spirit.

Activities began early in the fall with a Pep Club-sponsored Spirit Week. Then, at the November Homecoming game, Cavalier Charlie, representing the Pep Club, made a spirited appearance on his white charger. From Cavalier Charlie, pep clubbers went a step farther with "Fandango-go", which used student talent for the evening's entertainment of dancers and bands. The many events planned by the club demonstrated the presence of Cavalier spirit, which later proved contagious.

Cavalier Corps kept lunch trays from stacking up

Sporting gold and white emblems on blue cardigan sweaters, the Cavalier Corps performed the difficult tasks of patrolling the cafeterias and supervising the home basketball games.

Led by president Dan Moorefield and under the direction of Mr. Knupp and Mr. Bielich, the club did its best to keep the cafeteria lines orderly and the cafeteria tables free of trays.

Working at every home basketball game and many of Fairfax's "home" games, the Cavalier Corps performed such odd jobs as setting up the refreshment stand, keeping the exits clear, and seeing that no one brought food into the gym during halftime. After the games, they helped in folding the bleachers.

Band and Choruses joined to present 1966

After long hours of practice the Cavalier Bands performed at pep rallies, concerts, assemblies, and halftime shows. The Marching Band, under the direction of Mr. Buskirk, performed combined halftime shows with James Madison High School and with Fairfax High School. Mr. Grant, a new member of the music department, directed the Concert and Reserve Bands.

The Band's calendar contained a variety of concerts and assemblies. During February, the Band combined with the choirs and the Baton Corps to present the three performances of the Extravaganza. Each section of the band dressed in amusing costumes and played individual numbers. In the spring, the members of the Symphonic Band were filled with excitement as they prepared for their exchange concert with Governor Livingston Regional High School in Berkeley, New Jersey. The highlight of the 1966 year was the performance of the Symphonic Band at the graduation commencement exercises.

Choirs performed at Yuletide and Spring concerts

As students ambled along the music corridor, they often stopped to listen to tones that escaped from the closed doors. Pupils couldn't resist sneaking up to the door windows of the auditorium to see the Madrigals practicing rounds.

All choirs performed during the year, although the Freshman Chorus was primarily for training. December was one of the choirs' busiest months with each group appearing in one of the Christmas Concerts and Select Girls performing for Honor Society Inductions.

Choirs and Band joined ranks to stage the 1966 Extravaganza, "It's Magic", and the Spring Concert. The Symphonic Choir gave the last choir performance of the year at Baccalaureate on June fifth.

FRESHMEN

This year's freshmen, gathered from the halls of various intermediate schools, swarmed Woodson with forces of one thousand strong. During the first few weeks of school, they found themselves in a maze of rooms and halls that seemed to lead nowhere. But soon enough, freshmen were competing with upperclassmen for the right of way in every phase of Woodson life. In the October magazine drive, they took first place in the sale of subscriptions.

Perhaps the most important event for freshmen was the election for the rising Sophomore Class Officers. Participation in the political world of Woodson gave the Class of '69 the chance to put forth its goals for the school.

As the year progressed, freshmen discovered that their responsibilities included more than learning pronouns and computing $z+y$, and they realized that all their work had been worth the effort.

A black and white grid of 56 student portraits arranged in 7 rows and 8 columns. The portraits are of high school or college students, mostly in formal attire like suits and ties. The students are of various ethnicities and are posed in a formal, head-and-shoulders style. The grid is organized into seven horizontal rows, each containing eight individual portraits. The students are looking directly at the camera with neutral expressions. The background of each portrait is a plain, light color. The overall layout is clean and professional, typical of a yearbook or official school directory.

A black and white photograph of a large group of people, likely a choir or a group of students, standing in several rows. They are dressed in formal attire, possibly uniforms or traditional clothing. The image is somewhat faded and has a grainy texture.

SOPHOMORES

The Sophomore Class was clearly a part of Woodson's functioning body after the first few weeks of school. Their activities began with a car wash on a fall afternoon, followed that night by a discotheque-style dance, "Someplace Else". Go-Go girls in crepe-papered cafeteria B provided an appropriate atmosphere.

As January arrived, Hush Week fell like "sounds of silence" upon Woodson's noisy halls. The days passed as cards slipped from hand to hand, while sophomores silently prepared for their Hush Dance. At the end of the week, the boy and girl from each class who had the most cards were chosen for the Hush Court. From this court, Mr. and Miss Irresistable were crowned.

Under the guidance of their officers and their sponsor, Mrs. Morton, the sophomores strove to make Woodson a more unified school and to improve their participation in school activities.

Gradually, the new Junior Class of Woodson underwent a transformation to become a class capable of sponsoring many diverse activities. In addition to traditional functions, the class directed its energies into such projects as the workday at Junior Village.

As a junior, a student had opportunity to participate in any one of a variety of class undertakings, including the play, "Inherit the Wind," or the amusing frolics "Junior Jollies."

In the magazine drive, juniors formed an excellent spy ring which later successfully appropriated the funds for giving the popular Sadie Hawkins, Sweetheart, and Ring Dances. However, before the Junior-Senior Basketball game, junior spies' efforts to uncover senior plans met with predictable defeat.

At last the juniors received their rings, their proof of past achievements and symbols of future challenges in the Senior year.

Mahan, Penny Richard, Linda Welch, Gayl Gonseth, Carol Gier, Sonney McPherson, Pam White, Chris Cresswell, Penny Vigore, Vick Younts, Hedy Massey.

The Class of '66 was the first one to complete four years at Woodson High School. By consistently upholding true Woodson ideals, Seniors set an example to be followed by underclassmen.

Although many students experienced the traditional senior slump, spirit soared high this year. Seniors demonstrated their concern for social welfare by donating their profits of the Senior Work Day to the Ship Hope. At the Senior Class Playday, they congratulated themselves on their escape from two Step and Scat tests. But in December and January, most Seniors feared the ever-important College Boards. These were easily forgotten however as they undertook the production of "South Pacific".

Graduation opened new doors to Seniors and brought to a close the past twelve years of accomplishment. As Seniors reluctantly turned their backs on their high school career, a life with more responsibilities began.

D-Day: Ann Hinds hears of college acceptance.

Roby settles down peacefully for his yearly haircut. Barber Jones wields the scissors.

Just a trim, Roby? How about this much? Barbara calmly inquires.

Isn't he adorable? Roby seems to think otherwise. Roby Bennett. Barbara Jones.

 by my picture of subject year. I got from the new book class. Don't know if it's correct. I had it checked and it's all right. I'm sure. I'm sure.

June 6, 1967 (!)

Dear Scott,

I thought that since I've kept your yearbook for a year. I would write something in it.

Of course, you know I'm not going to put anything too, too private, on this sheet of paper. In fact I feel stupid writing anything.

You know how much I care, you know I think you're the greatest! and you know I'll miss you more than anyone when we go to college, so there's nothing more to say.

Your best friend,
Nancy

That's not funny, huh!

Love always,

Nancy
(Loney)

June 7, 1966

Dear Scott,

If I have not been convinced of anything else this year, I know for a certainty that there is a unique being on this earth. It is, without a doubt, The Scott Beuch. In the eyes of his congregation, i.e. S.B., The Scott Beuch makes the Eighth Wonder of the World. Aside from this, The Scott Beuch (anti-DeGaulle) is actually a pretty good character to have around if one wishes to be torn to shreds (verbally and physically) and humiliated in the presence of others. Doesn't the Scott Beuch sound like an interesting experience - one you'll never forget?

Well, Charles, that character isn't quite so bad. Thanks muchly for everything, and I hope that life will be good to you because, with a little effort, you'll go a long way and really make your mark in the world. (All my confidence...)

Deux petits choses qu'il faut pour n'oublier jamais: 1) Je serai toujours ton amie, et

2) Le w.c. est comme ça!!!

Bon chance... Je t'embrasse.

Je t'aime,

Jamie

Scott,
 Lots of luck to a cute
 guy with a great sense of humor. Hope you'll be in my govt class next year.
 Love ya,
 Debbie

Scott,
 Hope to see you
 next year in govt.
 It should be interesting.
 You're a little "Commie" but...
 Love ya,
 Heddy
 Massery

Scott,
 I've really enjoyed your friendship and hope we can continue to be friends even though...
 Stay Sweet Scott when you're you so much that you're Really I mean it. Think me

Love,
 Sherry

(Excuse the chicken scratch)
 Scott,
 Book of luck
 to a real great guy. It is very and engaging would have been pretty dull with
 you. See ya keep things going. Love ya, "H"
 Thanks

Scott, I hope to see you next year in govt. It should be interesting. You're a little "Commie" but... Love ya, Heddy Massery
